Q: Multiple monitors in VirtualBox - no "extended" desktop I'm running a Ubuntu 14.04 host and a 12.04 guest (VirtualBox), with Ubuntu installed inside a VirtualBox install of Linux Mint. I can see dual monitors just fine, but there's no extended desktop capability (as far as I can tell) so the two separate screens are quite small when the guest is full-screen. What settings do I need to change in order to have the guest display act normally? A: Edit: OK, got it! Here are the settings you will need: Create a new virtual machine as follows: Create a new virtual machine Choose New from one of the menus Make sure that your hard disk is a Hard Drive, that you use VMDK format, that there is an OK to 'Leave virtual machine settings unchanged' and make sure that the 'Create new virtual disk' option is selected Choose Linux from the virtual machine template menu Choose Ubuntu from the file system menu Assign the disk you just created and make sure that the whole disk is selected (you may have to choose from the bottom of the left-hand pane, near the bottom, a submenu of the disk), save and restart the virtual machine Go to the settings window for the virtual machine and set the DPI to 96 (Ctrl+Alt+1 and then Ctrl+Alt+3), Screen size to 1920×1080 (Ctrl+Alt+2), Graphics to 'Use hardware acceleration' and Format (Ctrl+Alt+4). Delete the guest VM. Right-click on the virtual machine to create a new
